

Eleuterio Sánchez Rodríguez, known as El Lute, was at one time Spain's most wanted criminal. The legendary Spanish outlaw escaped several times from prison after being sentenced at age 23 to 30 years for murder.

While in prison, „El Lute“ learnt to read, earned a law degree, and became a writer.

He was pardoned and released in 1981, at the age of 39.

When Eleuterio Sánchez Rodríguez was born in 1942 in Western Spain, his father was in prison. Eleuterio never had any school education as a child. He wasn't able to read or to write. As a young man, he stole two hens and was sentenced to six months in prison. Soon after his release, in 1965, he was arrested again, accused of murder and sentenced to death for the armed robbery of a jewellery store in Madrid, in which a security guard was killed. His sentence was changed to 30 years in prison. On the train to the prison, he managed to open his handcuffs using a wire he had hidden in his clothes. He could jump off the train. In prison he was allowed to weave carpets to earn a little money. He kept out a few pieces of thread every day with which he made a rope. It took him five years to finish it. During the time he was on the run, he committed 111 robberies and 16 car thefts all over Spain. Was El Lute a Spanish Robin Hood? A man who robbed the rich and helped the poor? Yes, since he was helping himself and he was poor. He became a legend owing to his daring escapes from jail. He was listed by the police as Spain's "most wanted" criminal. He was a good-looking man. At the time when practically the entire police force of Spain, on foot, in cars, on motorcycles, in helicopters, were searching for him, the women of Spain were praying that El Lute wouldn't be caught. When back in prison he taught himself to read. He even studied foreign languages. He went on to earn a law degree, wrote five books, and continued his fight to clear his name. With the end of the Franco regime, Sánchez was pardoned. Finally he became a lawyer.

Boney M: El Lute

This is the story of El Lute

A man who to be hunted like a wild animal chased

Because he was poor

But he to accept his fate

say yes to his destiny

And today his honor has been restored reputation

He was only

And he was sentenced to die judged

For something that else did

And blamed on El Lute made responsible

Then they it to life

And so he could escape

flee

..... they chased him

hunted

And searched for him day and night

.....

But the search was in vain for El Lute

He had only seen the dark side of

The man they called El Lute

And he wanted a home just like you and

In a country where all would be free

So he taught himself

It didn't help El Lute

He was one who had dared to escape risked

They had to find El Lute

Soon the of his name

Spread like wild fire all over the land extended

With a price on reward

People still gave him bread

And they

For they knew he was right

And his fight was

No one gave you a chance

In the Spain of

On the walls every place they had put up

..... of El Lute

And he robbed where he could just like Robin Hood stole

They finally caught him and

That the end

But they caught him in vain

without success

Cause came for Spain

because

(The dead of dictator Franco and the end of fascism)

And El Lute

He had only seen the of life

The man they called El Lute

And he just like you and like me

In a country where all would be free

And then really came to his land

And also to El Lute

Now he walks in the light of

The man they called El Lute

Boney M. is a vocal group created by German record producer Frank Farian. Originally based in Germany, the four original members of the group's official line-up were Jamaican-born singers Liz Mitchell and Marcia Barrett, Maizie Williams from Montserrat and Bobby Farrell from Aruba. The group was formed in 1976 and achieved popularity during the disco era of the late 1970s. Since the 1980s, various line-ups of the band have performed with different personnel.
