

There was a fair in our town. I decided to visit a fortune-teller. Her name was Madam Starlight. I went into her tent.

Madam Starlight told me to sit down. She looked into a crystal ball and said: "Money will come and go. Yes, it will. And what else do I see? As soon as you are leaving this tent a nice young lady will speak to you. And she will lead you away from here to a place full of monsters and dragons. Then she will kiss you. That's all. Now, will you give me five pounds, please?"

When I left Madam Starlight's tent, my little sister rushed towards me. She was crying and told me she had lost her money. "Where did you lose your money?" I asked her. She showed me the place near the ghost train. Finally, I saw some coins on the ground. My little sister was really happy. She took the money, stood on tiptoes to give me a quick kiss, and then left for the merry-go-round.

CHANGE TO THE GOING-TO-FUTURE:

She'll kiss him. ... She's going to kiss him.

We'll visit a fortune-teller.

You'll lose your money.

She'll tell him the whole story.

I won't give you five pounds.

Will you see her tomorrow?

Will she show us the place?
