

Hemingway was an American writer of novels and short stories. He had an adventurous life. He died in 1961.

Much of Ernest Hemingway's writing is based on his own adventurous life. He drove an ambulance in World War I and was a war correspondent in World War II and in the Spanish Civil War. He went hunting to Africa, was a deep-sea fisherman, and loved bullfighting. He was a hard drinker, a fighter, and was married four times.

His books reflect his life and interests. His first success was "A Farewell to Arms" in 1929. It was about his experiences in Italy in World War I. "Death in the Afternoon" came out in 1932. It was a study of bullfighting. "For Whom the Bell Tolls" tells of an episode of the Spanish Civil War. "The Old Man and the Sea" is about an old fisherman trying to catch a huge fish.

Hemingway's writing skills were rewarded with the Pulitzer Prize in 1953 and the Nobel Prize in 1954. Despite his success, Hemingway became depressed by his drinking problem and his failing health. He shot himself in 1961.

novel: fictional book success: achievement farewell: bye-bye arms: weapons

experience: skill skill: knowledge huge: giant reward: prize

despite: against fail: be unsuccessful, ruin health: in good shape

Find the odd one in each line:

Ernest Hemingway	William Faulkner	Bernhard Shaw	Donald Trump	Mark Twain gun	rifle	knife	spear	kiss novel	reward	story	poem	letter petrol	whiskey	gin	brandy	vodka lion	tiger	hippo	elephant	rabbit bullfight	farewell	good bye	see you	bye bye depressed	sad	unhappy	miserable	huge prize	reward	salary	episode	wages experience	knowledge	nonsense	skill	know-how huge	minor	giant	mighty	large catch	grab	seize	release	nab bullfight	siesta	Spain	Barrier Reef	Civil War death	marry	kill	dead	die
Africa	Spain	USA	Italy	Finland

Delete the titles which are not by Ernest Hemingway:

From Russia with Love	A Farewell to Arms	Death in the Afternoon	Good Morning, America
For Whom the Bell Tolls	Jingle Bells All the Way	Fish without Bicycle	Men Without Women
Youth in the Desert Storm	The Old Man and the Sea	The Snows of Kilimanjaro	The Sahara Icebergs
The Sun Also Rises	Sail Along, Silvery Moon	Hell's Backgarden	The Garden of Eden